Mathematical Biosciences

an international journal

Volume 122

A. Sikder and A. B. Roy (Calcutta, India)
Persistence of a Generalized Gause-Type Two Prey–Two Predator Pair Linked by Competition 1

Mark A. Taylor, Stavros Pavlou, and Ioannis G. Kevrekidis (Princeton, New Jersey)
Microbial Predation in Coupled Chemostats: A Global Study of Two Coupled Nonlinear Oscillators 25

Zheng Tan (Research Triangle Park, North Carolina)
DNA Damage and the Proliferation and Aging of Cells in Culture: A Mathematical Model with Time Lag 67

Richard G. Lanzara (New York City, New York)
Weber's Law Modeled by the Mathematical Description of a Beam Balance 89

Ying Lu (Miami, Florida) and Hina M. Malani (Berkeley, California)
Estimating Multiple Tumor Transition Rates Based on Data from Survival-Sacrifice Experiments 95

Peter F. Stadler (Wien, Austria, and Santa Fe, New Mexico) and Juan Carlos Nuño (Madrid, Spain)
The Influence of Mutation on Autocatalytic Reaction Networks 127

Steven M. Pincus (Guilford, Connecticut)
Greater Signal Regularity May Indicate Increased System Isolation 161

Marek Kimmel (Houston, Texas) and Ovide Arino (Pau, France)
Two Simple Models of Almost the Same Population with Very Different Dynamics 183

L. R. Hlatky and P. Hahnfeldt (Boston, Massachusetts) and R. K. Sachs (Berkeley, California)
The Influence of Time-Dependent Stochastic Heterogeneity on the Radiation Response of a Cell Population 201

AARON KLEBANOFF (Davis, California, and Terre Haute, Indiana)
AND ALAN HASTINGS (Davis, California)
Chaos in One-Predator, Two-Prey Models: General Results from Bifurcation Theory 221
WENDI WANG (Chongqing, People's Republic of China)
AND ZHIEN MA (Xi'an, People's Republic of China)
Permanence of Populations in a Polluted Environment 235